Waffle House jukeboxes all over the country, no small feat for an independent artist.

Entertainment blogger “Ear to the Ground” said this about Casey and the song Waffle House — “We don’t approve a lot of country music around here these days, so when we do you know it has to be of a particularly high quality. When it comes to Casey Kearney, it’s easy to hear that quality come through in both composition and vocal. Kearney reminds me most notably of Kacey Musgraves. The charming, gentle timeless country sound here feels quite comfortable. It’s nice to find such a rewarding, genuine sound. The lyrical theme of meeting someone at a Waffle House is sure to be the story for more than a few folks. It’s cute and is sure to find Kearney a lot of new fans.”

To display her unique vocal diversity Casey released “Somebody’s Favorite Song” a full album of cover songs ranging from current pop/ rock songs to classic country. ACM Winner and hit songwriter Karen Staley wrote about the album “Her versatile voice, the elegant pared down production that allow her & the songs to shine along with the undeniable, authentic, respectful treatment with which she interpreted each song is impressive, a great voice singing timeless songs is always a winner.”

Casey was the founder and president of the non-profit organization "Bands of 30A" which raised over $100,000 for various charities through community concerts featuring local bands.

Recently Casey Kearney and producer Doug Kahan have launched a project called “Life in Lyrics.” After hearing some of Casey’s songs during live performances she was approached by numerous people to write their personal story, or put poems and ideas to music.
